Court service-improvement program returning to Jefferson County Surveys to be conducted June 21 at the Jefferson County Courthouse

GOLDEN, Colo. – Three years after using public surveys to gather information to help improve the way the courts of Colorado’s 1st Judicial District conduct their business, judges, magistrates, clerks and other court employees will collect more data this week.

“This program is a crucial tool in helping us make sure we are providing the best service possible to the public,” 1st Judicial District Chief Judge R. Brooke Jackson said. “We’re looking forward to gaining new insight to help guide our continuing efforts.”

On Tuesday, June 21, court employees will spend time talking to people about their experiences as jurors, parties to a case or as recipients of other Judicial Branch services. Attorneys, law enforcement officers and anyone who does business with the courts will be encouraged to participate. People exiting the Jefferson County Courthouse will be asked whether they had business with the courts and are willing to fill out a brief anonymous survey. Survey forms will be available in English and Spanish.

The survey is designed to measure public opinion about access to and fairness of the courts. Questions include whether people felt safe in the building, whether they could easily understand the forms they needed, and whether they felt their case was handled in a fair manner. Participants also are asked whether they felt the judge or magistrate listened to them, whether they had all the necessary information before making a decision, and whether they felt they were treated with courtesy and given clear information about the next step in their case.

The new information will be used not only to check the progress of changes initiated since the first round of surveys, but also to support the possibility of further improvements.

Since 2008, the surveys have been used at least once in each of Colorado's 22 judicial districts.

In Fiscal Year 2010, about 86,400 cases were filed in the courts in Jefferson County. That number includes 23,780 cases filed in District Court and 62,593 in Jefferson County Court.
