Colorado Commission on Judicial Discipline names Judge Minot chair

DENVER – The Colorado Commission on Judicial Discipline announced today the Hon. Martha T. Minot, a County Judge in the 6th Judicial District, has been elected Chair of the Commission. She succeeds former 20th Judicial District Chief Judge Roxanne Bailin, who retired from the bench and from the Commission on Aug. 31.

Judge Minot was appointed to the County Court bench in 1995 in La Plata County. Prior to her appointment, she served as a part-time magistrate and was in private practice in Durango. She is serving her third four-year term as a member of the Commission.

The Commission monitors and, when necessary, applies disciplinary measures, regarding compliance by the Colorado judiciary with the Colorado Code of Judicial Conduct. Established in 1967 under the Colorado Constitution, the Commission is comprised of four judges, two attorneys, and four citizens who are not attorneys or judges.

Current members, along with Judge Minot, include District Judge Ted C. Tow, District Judge William D. Robbins, and County Judge Leroy D. Kirby; attorneys Federico Alvarez and Richard O. Campbell; and David L. Dill, Kathleen Kelley, David Kenney, and Yolanda Lyons. The Executive Director is William J. Campbell.
