John Tweedy is a trained mediator who works to help people who are involved in disputes to gain more control over the process. Especially in divorce and family matters, John starts by listening closely to each party in a confidential environment, so that he can hear what's important to the people in the conflict, not just what the legal system deems relevant. He then helps parties exchange key information, and develops person-centered alternatives to resolve the issues. John believes that mediation offers people opportunities to find creative solutions that are better, and last longer, than decisions imposed by a court.

John has also spent over twenty years as a commercial litigator, handling cases ranging from small landlord-tenant disputes to complex business cases involving multiple parties and millions of dollars. This experience makes him well-qualified to mediate commercial, construction, and other business cases involving multiple parties and claims, insurance coverage considerations, and intricate fact patterns. This broad perspective enables John to help parties explore the risks they may face if the matter goes to trial.

John's combination of emotional intelligence and legal sophistication gives him the skillset to tackle a wide variety of mediations. His empathic approach helps parties in divorce mediations, and other family and parenting disputes feel safe, manage their emotions, and focus on the greater needs at stake. He has also spent years of practice in special education law, giving him additional insight into the challenges faced by parents of kids with special needs.

John received his JD from Stanford Law School in 1991, his BA from the University of Colorado at Boulder, and his MA in Sociology from Brown University. He received his mediation training through the Colorado Bar Association. He is a professional member of the Mediation Association of Colorado. When not working as a lawyer or mediator, John produces documentary films. He is married and has two children.

John is fluent in Spanish, and he has experience working with Latino families on cultural and educational issues in Boulder County. Para recibir más información en Español, visite su sitio web: www.tweedy-law.com, o marque 712-582-0559
