Jennifer Morrell showed up everywhere before, during, and after the 2020 Election in numerous states. In one tweet she posted after the election, she highlighted a press release by corrupt Secretary of State Katie Hobbs. This tweet has since been taken down.

Jennifer Morrell from the Election Group and other far-left and many Soros-related organizations. Only a couple of days ago we reported that Morrell was at an event in Colorado months before the 2020 Election with election officials and Eric Coomer from Dominion.

Jennifer Morrell from 'The Elections Group' Turned Up in Several States — Now Seen Partying with Dominion Executive Eric Coomer and Colorado Democrats and Election Officials

The far-left "The Elections Group" founder Jennifer Morrell continues to pop up almost any place where the results of the 2020 Election were in question. We reported earlier that Jennifer Morrell was located in Georgia after the 2020 election when 'The Elections Group' was identified in an investigation there. Ms. Morrell also showed up in ... Today we located a tweet from Morrell which has since been deleted where she highlights a memo by corrupt Arizona Secretary of State Katie Hobbs.

The memo from Katie Hobbs shared the following:

 Secretary Katie Hobbs
@SecretaryHobbs

Arizona Secretary of State Katie Hobbs released this statement in response to ongoing and escalating threats of violence directed at her family and her office.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

KATIE HOBBS
SECRETARY OF STATE

Nov. 18, 2020

Secretary Hobbs: 'I was prepared for these threats of violence and vitriol'

Arizona Secretary of State Katie Hobbs released this statement in response to ongoing and escalating threats of violence directed at her family and her office:

"The truth is, I was prepared for these threats of violence and vitriol. I have been a social worker for many years and can anticipate this reaction when certain people feel powerless and angry. These actions are utterly abhorrent, especially when directed at my family and my staff. They are a symptom of a deeper problem in our state and country – the consistent and systematic undermining of trust in each other and our democratic process. Arizonans deserve to know that elections are safe and secure.

"This does not excuse the perpetrators. Their continued intimidation tactics will not prevent me from performing the duties I swore an oath to do. Our democracy is tested constantly, it continues to prevail, and it will not falter under my watch.

"But there are those, including the president, members of Congress and other elected officials, who are perpetuating misinformation and are encouraging others to distrust the election results in a manner that violates the oath of office they took. It is well past time that they stop. Their words and actions have consequences.

"Now, I am calling on other leaders in this state, including the governor whose deafening silence has contributed to the growing unrest, to stand up for the truth. When facing unimaginable challenges this election year, Arizonans stepped up. More people are registered to vote in our state than ever before, election participation has been at historic highs, thousands answered the call to work at voting locations during a pandemic, and people made their voices heard.

"This should be a time for thanking voters and election workers for their incredible commitment during unprecedented challenges. In that spirit, I offer my gratitude and express my admiration for the Arizonans who inspire trust in our democracy."

Hobbs called out President Trump and accused him of promoting lies – this is ripe coming from the Secretary of State where massive corruption occurred in order to steal the state away from President Trump in the 2020 Election.

Hobbs made a big stink about nothing and the Arizona lapdog media ate it up.

Morrell and Hobbs are two peas in a corrupt pod with many, many more.
