STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Whether the titles set by the Title Board adequately inform voters of the central features of Proposed Initiative 2019-2020 #245.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Proponents Natalie Menten and Chip Creager seek to circulate #245 to obtain the requisite number of signatures to place a measure on the ballot to amend the state constitution. The proposed initiative would change numerous aspects of the petitioning process for initiatives and referenda. Record for Initiative #245, p 2, filed March 11, 2020 (“Record”).

The Board concluded that the measure contained a single subject and proceeded to set a title at its February 19, 2020 meeting. Id. at 4. Petitioner Kelly Brough filed a timely motion for rehearing, arguing that #245 contained multiple subjects, that the titles failed to advise voters of central features of the measure, and that the Board should not have set a title because the measure was “vague, unclear and incomprehensible.” Id. at 5-10.

On March 4, 2020, the Board denied the motion for rehearing as it related to the single subject challenge and that the Board should not have set a title because the measure was incomprehensible. Id. at 12. The Board did, however, make substantial changes to the titles in a rehearing lasting nearly two hours. Compare id. at 11 with id. at 4.¹ In her petition for review, Petitioner now challenges only whether the titles fairly advise voters of the measure’s central features.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Titles crafted by the Title Board need to describe the central features of the initiative, not every detail. The Board is also required to draft “brief” titles. The Board has broad discretion to effectuate this dual mandate.

Here, the Board acted well within its discretion in crafting a title. The initiative proposes changes to numerous details of the initiative and referendum process, with a general purpose of liberalizing that process. The titles concisely summarize those changes, without delving into every specific provision of the measure. The specific details Petitioner argues should be included in the titles are not central features of the measure and are sufficiently described by the titles drafted by the Board.

ARGUMENT

I. The titles set by the Board inform voters of the measure’s central features.

A. Standard of review and preservation.

“The Title Board is vested with considerable discretion in setting the title and the ballot title and submission clause.” In re Title, Ballot Title & Submission Clause for 2015-2016 #156, 2016 CO 56, ¶ 8 (quotations omitted). The Court “employ[s] all legitimate presumptions in favor of the propriety of the Title Board’s actions,” and will “only reverse the Title Board’s decision if the titles are insufficient, unfair, or misleading.” Id. (quotations omitted). It thus follows that the Court does not “consider whether the Title Board set the best possible title.” In re Title, Ballot Title & Submission Clause for 2019-2020 #3, 2019 CO 107, ¶ 17. Rather, the Court only “ensure[s] that the title fairly reflects the proposed initiative such that voters will not be misled into supporting or opposing the initiative because of the words that the Title Board employed.” Id.

The Board agrees that Petitioner preserved her challenge to whether the titles clearly set forth the central features of the measure.

B. The titles set by the Board adequately describe the central features of the measure.

“The Title Board’s duty in setting a title is to summarize the central features of a proposed initiative.” In re Title, Ballot Title, & Submission Clause for 2013-2014 #90, 2014 CO 63, ¶ 24. The Board “is given discretion in resolving interrelated problems of length, complexity, and clarity in setting a title and ballot title and submission clause.” Id.

“It is well-established that the titles and summary need not spell out every detail of a proposed initiative in order to convey its meaning accurately and fairly.” In re Title, Ballot Title, & Submission Clause for 1997-1998 # 74, 962 P.2d 927, 930 (Colo. 1998). To the contrary, ballot titles must “be brief.” § 1-40-106(3)(b), C.R.S. (2019); see also In re Title, Ballot Title, & Submission Clause Pertaining to Proposed Initiative on Educ. Tax Refund, 823 P.2d 1353, 1357 (Colo. 1991) (same). “The Board need not and often cannot describe every feature of a proposed initiative in a title or ballot title and submission clause and simultaneously heed the mandate that such documents be concise.” In re Title, Ballot Title, & Submission Clause for 1997-1998 #62, 961 P.2d 1077, 1083 (Colo. 1998) (quotations omitted).

Petitioner objects that the titles do not detail certain components of the initiative. But they do not need to. The titles fairly inform voters of the central features of the measure and are in no way misleading to the voters. In light of the number of specific changes to the petitioning process contained in #245, the titles reflect an appropriate balance between the statutory mandate of being brief and describing the central features. How to strike this balance lies well within the Board’s discretion, In re 2013-2014 #90, 2014 CO 63, ¶ 24, and the Board consciously and reasonably exercised that discretion here.²

The petition for review identifies six parts of #245 that Petitioner contends should have been addressed in greater detail. The omission of these specific details do not render the titles misleading, but instead reflect an appropriate and reasonable balance between the “interrelated problems of length, complexity, and clarity.” In re 2013-2014 #90, 2014 CO 63, ¶ 24.

1. Rehearing before the Title Board.

Petitioner first objects that the titles do not state that the measure eliminates the opportunity for rehearing before the Title Board. She claims this would increase the burden on petition proponents to advocate for a ballot title at the initial Title Board hearing before being appealed directly to the Supreme Court.

The titles currently state that the measure “chang[es] requirements, procedures and deadlines for . . . protesting petitions, including changing the venue and accelerating the protest process.” Record, p 11. How much detail to provide about how the rehearing process is altered was within the discretion of the Board. The title fairly advises the voter that the protest process is altered by “accelerating” that process and changing the “venue.” Petitioner seems mostly to object to the effect of the measure, which she believes would result in proponents without counsel being placed at a disadvantage by having to go straight to the Supreme Court. But “the Title Board may not speculate on the potential effects of the initiative if enacted.” In re Title, Ballot Title, & Submission Clause for 2013-2014 #89, 2014 CO 66, ¶ 24. Accordingly, the titles adequately describe this provision of the measure.

3:28:00) (“I think this is the best we can do, is to put the voter on notice, without making this 200 words.”).

2. Reduction of signature requirements.

The proposed measure would decrease the amount of signatures required to place a measure on the ballot, setting the required number at “5% of district active registered electors, up to 111,000 entries.” Record, p 2. Petitioner objects that the titles should specifically mention this. Instead, the titles provide that the measure will “chang[e] requirements, procedures, and deadlines for . . . circulating petitions and qualifying petitions for the ballot, including elimination of the requirement that signatures for constitutional amendments be gathered from all parts of the state.” Id. at 11. By using the word “including,” the titles indicate that there are additional “requirements, procedures and deadlines” that will be changed by the measure. The level of detail requested by Petitioner is not required, and the Board acted within its reasonable discretion in determining which details of the measure to specifically identify and which to describe more generally. See In re 2013-2014 #90, 2014 CO 63, ¶ 24 (the Board has discretion to “resolv[e] interrelated problems of length, complexity, and clarity in setting a title and ballot title and submission clause”).

3. Change to petition circulator affidavit requirements.

Petitioner next argues that the titles should inform voters that the measure would eliminate the current law that invalidates signatures gathered by a petition circulator who fails to accurately complete their affidavit. But this change is not a central feature of the measure. The average voter is probably not even aware of the statutory provision invalidating petitions sections based on deficient affidavits. Requiring the titles to specify this level of detail would answer a question that few would even think to ask. The “Board is not required to include every aspect of a proposal in the title and submission clause, to discuss every possible effect, or provide specific explanations of the measure.” In re Title, Ballot Title, & Submission Clause for 1999-2000 #245(f), (g), 1 P.3d 739, 745 (Colo. 2000). The titles make clear the measure changes the process for “circulating petitions and qualifying petitions for the ballot,” which sufficiently advises voters of the central features of the initiative. Record, p 11.

4. Elimination of district court review for name and signature protests.

Petitioner contends that the titles fail “to inform voters that the measure would eliminate name and signature protests to district court and instead require all protests to begin in the Supreme Court, thus converting this Court into a court of first impression on all factual matters relating to petitions.” Pet. at 4-5. The titles expressly state that the measure changes the requirements for “protesting petitions, including changing the venue and accelerating the protest process.” Pet.

at 11. This is more than adequate notice of changing the district court venue to the Supreme Court. Petitioner's complaint that the effect of this would be to make this Court the court of first impression for signature challenges is an effort to include the effects of the measure in the title, which is not required. See In re 2013-2014 #90, 2014 CO 63, ¶ 24 (the Board "is not required to explain the meaning or potential effects of the proposed initiative on the current statutory scheme").

5. Allowance of odd-year ballot measures.

Next, Petitioner argues that the titles should expressly state that the measure would allow any initiative to be voted on in any off-year election. Again, this level of detail is not required. The titles alert voters to changes in the "requirements, procedures and deadlines" for "circulating petitions and qualifying petitions for the ballot." Record, p 11. Consistent with the Board's broad authority to determine what level of detail is appropriate while keeping the titles brief, the Board acted appropriately in declining to provide this level of specificity in its titles.

6. Requiring voter approval for statutory changes on the same topic as a successful petition.

Finally, Petitioner objects that the titles should “inform voters that the measure would fundamentally restrict the otherwise plenary power of the General Assembly to legislate by requiring voter approval for statutory changes on the same ‘topic’ as any successful referendum.” Pet. for Review at 5. The titles state that the measure would “allow[] laws enacted by initiative to be changed only by another initiative.” Record, p 11. This is the precise language Petitioner suggested the Title Board use at the rehearing, and the Board adopted it.³

Not only was this the language Petitioner requested, it also conveys the primary feature of this part of the measure—when voters speak, the General Assembly cannot legislate in that area. Whatever additional detail Petitioner now seeks to add is simply not required. See In re 1997-1998 # 74, 962 P.2d at 930 (“the titles and summary need not spell out every detail of a proposed initiative in order to convey its meaning accurately and fairly”).

CONCLUSION

The Court should affirm the decisions of the Title Board.

Respectfully submitted on this 31st day of March, 2020.
