

Law School for Journalists: Immigration Law in Colorado

With lawmakers poised to introduce legislation related to illegal immigration, you may be asking yourself, how does immigration law in Colorado work today and what impact could measure(s) introduced during the session have on current law if passed? Learn the answers to these questions and more during the first installment of the revived Law School for Journalists program.

Join us at 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 26, at the Colorado Bar Association-Continuing Legal Education offices, 1900 Grant St., Suite 300, in Denver. Nancy Elkind, an immigration attorney and partner with Elkind Alterman Harston PC, will be the guest speaker. Elkind works extensively with national and international organizations regarding their business immigration matters. She has twice been chair of the Colorado Chapter of American Immigration Lawyers Association and has served on numerous national committees of the association. She was lead counsel on the pivotal labor certification case Matter of Information Industries.

You may attend in-person or online via a live webinar. The program will run until 1 p.m. and there is no cost to attend. Please RSVP to lunches@cobar.org or 303-860-1115, ext. 727.

Law School for Journalists is sponsored by the Colorado Bar Association, the Colorado Judicial Branch and the Colorado Society of Professional Journalists. The aim of the program is to provide meaningful information on legal topics to journalists.

For more information or to suggest topics, please contact CBA Communications Specialist Sara Crocker at scrocker@cobar.org or 303-824-5347.